Ambrose backs 'unborn' bill

Tory MP says Dion 'fear-mongering' with vow to block C-484

Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Rona Ambrose, one of the most socially progressive members of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government, is throwing her support behind a private member's bid to legally recognize the rights of the unborn.

Ambrose told reporters she backs the so-called Unborn Victims of Crime Act, or C-484, a bill put forward by Conservative MP Ken Epp, that critics call a backdoor method to make abortions more difficult to obtain in Canada.

Ambrose

Epp says his bill states it doesn't apply to abortion, and Ambrose, who worked with women's shelters in her pre-political life, said yesterday the bill is about crime, not abortion.

"Our government has no interest, no intention of reopening the abortion debate. That debate is over. It was over a long time ago, but there is an issue of protecting pregnant women who choose to have a baby," Ambrose told Torstar News Service.

Ambrose said she decided to weigh into the debate yesterday after she heard Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion vow at a news conference his party would do all it could to block C-484.

"I want to give my word to all the women of Canada that the Liberal Party of Canada is against (reopening) women's right to decide ... We are against that and we will not allow that to happen," Dion said.

"This is not a crime bill and this is a way to reopen the debate we don't want to reopen."

Ambrose said it's Dion who's turning it into an abortion debate.

"I think he's taking a very partisan tack on what could be a very non-partisan issue that we could address together," Ambrose said. "I think he's fear-mongering women on this issue." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Bad end for victim feared

By TIM WIECLAWSKI

Even before police yesterday confirmed Pamela Kosmack as the woman who was found dead near a city park on Wednesday, her neighbours suspected as much.

Maria Pool, who lives in the same New Orchard Avenue building where Kosmack resided, said the HIV-positive, drug-addicted woman could be cheerful at times, but her behaviour had become erratic, and she was associating with unpleasant people.

"She would call in the middle of the night. It was pretty bad. It's very unfortunate, but she was on drugs and she was probably with the wrong crowd," said Pool.

Police yesterday confirmed Kosmack, 39, and a mother of two, as the woman whose body was found badly beaten and partially naked beside a bike path east of Britannia Park.

Yesterday, investigators remained on scene. "They are basically combing the scene, square foot by square foot, ... to ensure there is not evidence left behind," said Const. J.P. Vincelette.

Vincelette said details concerning a possible suspect or suspects are not being released. The case is still considered a "suspicious death" until autopsy results come back.

Parents may be held responsible for wild teen bashes

By DEREK GORDANIER
Metro Ottawa

Parents who turn a blind eye to their teen children's end-of-school-year antics could find themselves hauled on the carpet for any trouble the youth cause.

Promising "zero tolerance" for students who break the law during year-end parties, city police warned yesterday they would employ all means — including the provincial Parental Responsibility Act — to curb the underage drinking, drug use and vandalism that sometimes accompany the teen bashes.

"You know, we don't want people thinking, Oh well, we're just going to get a warning — you know what, you've been warned now … there will be no more warnings," said Sgt. Kevin Kennedy. "We're going to be out and vigilant … and if we have people violating the law they should be prepared because they are going to be dealt with according to the law."

monitor kids
» Police encourage parents to monitor year-end activities and even host get-togethers in order to keep a controlled environment.

That includes parents. The Parental Responsibility Act allows for parents to be made to pay restitution for any damaged caused by their minor children.

Severe intoxication, drug use, assaults, general mischief, even grass fires from untended bonfires have all been hallmarks of past year-end parties that have spiralled out of control in Ottawa.

So-called Tequila Sunrise bush parties — in which students binge on alcohol from dusk to dawn — have lead to alcohol poisoning and overdoses, said city paramedics spokesman J.P. Trottier.

"I remember an incident where there were two unconscious patients … and when we arrived there was a fairly large group of teens who were very threatening. Paramedics actually feared for their safety and the teens were preventing them from coming out of their vehicles and going to the patient," Trottier said.

The paramedics were prevented for nearly 10 minutes from reaching the two young girls, both of whom were suffering from alcohol poisoning, he said.

"Anything is possible," Kennedy said. "I mean, you're mixing youth with alcohol and drugs and anything is possible."

Taste of Italy in weeklong festival

By TIM WIECLAWSKI
Metro Ottawa

It's the "amore" that makes the 34th annual Italian Week special, according to organizers.

From its humble beginning in which several dozen students gathered to read Dante and listen to traditional music, Italian Week has grown into one of Ottawa's largest cultural celebrations.

"This year the biggest thing is the co-operation between all the associations, so we have Italian Week, the BIA, the Ferrari (festival) and St. Anthony's church and they are all working together under the umbrella of Italian Week," said festival vice president Tony Mariano.

online
» Visit italianweekottawa.com online for event details.

The event kicked off yesterday, with the raising of the Italian flag at police headquarters and city hall, and runs through to June 15.

This weekend marks the religious aspect of the celebration, with the Feast of St. Anthony, and events focused around St. Anthony's Church at the corner of Booth and Gladstone streets.

One of the early highlights of Italian Week is an orchestral concert of Italian Classical Music on Monday night.

Air monitor doing half job

By TIM WIECLAWSKI
Metro Ottawa

A new monitor purchased by the city will help to predict local air quality from one day to the next – but is only going to do a half-job of it.

Facing a forecast of a sticky, smoggy summer in the capital, acting medical officer of health Isra Levy said yesterday that a new, $48,000 device that measures nitrogen and oxygen levels will help the city give its residents advance notice of the days that will be particularly bad.

» The monitor is easily upgradeable to measure particulate matter, but it would cost an additional $18,000..

However, the city admits its device only does a half-job of identifying air quality. Ideally, Levy said, the system should measure sulfur dioxide, particulate matter and volatile organic compounds as well as nitrogen oxides, to get a true measure of poor air quality that, in 2005 in Ottawa, contributed to 300 premature deaths, 750 hospitalizations and a million lost work days due to illness.

"There's a broad spectrum. This (device) gives us three of about six (measurements) that would be ideal, and we'll be building on top of that," he said.

Birgit Isernhagen, city planner for air, energy and corporate policy, said the new monitor is a step in the right direction.

"It's a good start because what's coming out of your tailpipe is mostly nitrogen oxide," she said. "Hopefully will be able to add on with particulate mater because that's the stuff that really bothers people with asthma."

The device can be moved around the city to take readings at project sites, for example, where air quality would be of concern.

Mayors fight for films

Senate committee hears how Bill C-10 would hurt cities

The mayors of the biggest cities in Canada told a Senate committee yesterday that removing the certainty of tax credits for the film and television industry would devastate a vital part of their economies.

"This proposal completely destabilizes the already difficult monetary terrain that film producers must navigate in their search for funding," said Toronto Mayor David Miller.

Miller appeared before the Senate standing committee on banking, trade and commerce alongside Montreal Mayor Gérald Tremblay to speak out against a controversial tax amendment that would alter guidelines for which films get public money.

The Canadian entertainment industry fears Bill C-10 will give the federal heritage minister too much power in deciding which films and shows should be excluded from tax breaks because they are "contrary to public policy."

Both mayors — who also read letters from Vancouver Mayor Sam Sullivan and Halifax Mayor Peter Kelly that outlined similar concerns — described how critical the film and television industries are to the economy of their cities.

> « The storm of uncertainty stirred up by Bill C-10 would effectively end the film industry overnight. »
> Toronto Mayor David Miller

Miller said production companies spent more than $700 million making movies and television shows in Toronto in 2006 and that the industry provides more than 35,000 jobs to the city.

He put forth a gloomy scenario if the amendment is brought into force.

"Canadian films are financed and made often on very tight budgets directly dependent on the tax credit that's been carefully designed to support Canadian productions," he said.

"The storm of uncertainty stirred up by Bill C-10 would effectively end the film industry overnight."

Conrad Black enters the Dirksen Federal building in Chicago last year. Black was back at that building yesterday to appeal convictions for fraud and obstruction of justice.

Black's appeal hearing begins

'Bizarre' act leads to uphill battle for former mogul

Here's U.S. appeals court judge Richard Posner's view of Black's controversial decision to spirit 13 boxes of documents out the back door of his Toronto office in May 2005: "I mean it was bizarre. The timing was bizarre, the removal of the documents in the middle of an investigation."

> « This is the weakest case I've seen in 45 years. »
> Appeals lawyer Andrew Frey

Posner was one of three judges who heard oral arguments at Black's appeal yesterday, a hearing held in the same building where his high-profile trial on fraud and obstruction of justice charges was held last year. The appeal marked one of the last chances for Black to topple one or more of the convictions secured against him last July.

In March, the former newspaper magnate began serving a six-and-a-half year jail sentence at a low-security prison in Coleman, Florida. His appeals lawyer Andrew Frey, one of the most influential lawyers in the U.S. — he has argued 64 cases in the U.S. Supreme Court alone — received the brunt of scrutiny from Posner and the two other judges.

"This is the weakest case I've seen in 45 years," Frey said at the outset of the proceedings, arguing that the documents Black took from Hollinger's office at 10 Toronto St. were combed through extensively by lawyers before he removed them. Any evidence the government presented during Black's trial "doesn't prove beyond a reasonable doubt his intent to conceal or destroy (documents)," Frey said.

Posner interrupted Frey, pointing out the lawyers who had access the papers were members of Black's legal team, not prosecutors.

Cuts force airlines to police safety

Canada's aviation system is the world's safest, federal regulators say, fending off critics who charge that funding cutbacks are forcing Transport Canada to implement a new, untested method of oversight.

Growing levels of air traffic and a shortage of civil aviation inspectors have left the transport department little choice but to introduce a controversial program giving aviation firms greater responsibility to police their own operations, said NDP MP Peter Julian.

TSB issues railroad wheel warning

Canadian safety inspectors warned North America's railroads yesterday to find up to 12,000 freight car wheel sets that remain in use, despite having been recalled years ago for safety problems.

The wheel sets, made by Canadian National Railway between 1998 and 2001, have been blamed for at least 15 derailments in Canada and an unknown number of accidents in the United States, according to the Transportation Safety Board of Canada.

Twelve of the Canadian derailments occurred after Canadian National discovered the problem, and the Association of American Railroads alerted other carriers that the defective wheel sets should be taken out of service.

Divers search for boaters

Friends of the missing boaters console each other as divers comb the lake northwest of Edmonton yesterday.

Missing for 3 days, friends and family fear the worst

Rescue divers frantically searched for three missing boaters yesterday on a lake north of Stony Plain, Alta., as family and friends stood by preparing for the worst.

"I'm feeling really sick," said Amelia Cormier, who has been searching for her missing nephew since Wednesday.

On Monday morning, 25-year-old Kyle Digous went on a fishing trip to Devil's Lake with a friend, 40-year-old Zsolt Boros and his five-year-old son Hunor Boros.

When the group didn't return from the lake, about 60 km northwest of Edmonton, family and friends became worried, and called police.

After Zsolt's van and boat trailer were discovered by RCMP on Wednesday morning on the shore Devil's Lake, a detailed search of the area began, and family members set up camp in an effort to help police.

Cormier set up camp with her family immediately after they had heard Kyle had disappeared.

"You never give up hope. You always have to hope something will be revealed," she said. "We're also getting ourselves prepared for what might be eventual, and it might not be what we want to hear."

Hockey Night theme skating on thin ice

CBC may replace unofficial second national anthem

The Hockey Night in Canada theme song, a mainstay of Canadian households for 40 years and often thought of as the unofficial second national anthem, may have launched its final hockey game, according to the company that controls use of the song.

The tune, which has opened the Canadian Broadcasting Corp's Saturday night National Hockey League broadcasts since the late 1960s, will not be renewed as the broadcaster has chosen to move in a new direction, said John Ciccone, president of Copyright Music & Visuals.

"Effective immediately following the last playoff game of this season the CBC will cease using the Hockey Night in Canada theme," he said in a statement on the company's website.

He said the CBC had advised the firm it is not prepared to enter into a new license agreement. The old agreement, which cost the CBC about $500 for each game broadcast, expired following the final game of the Stanley Cup playoffs Wednesday.

The CBC was sued in 2004 by the composer of the tune, saying the public broadcaster used it too much.

A courtroom sketch shows Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, right, and Waleed bin Attash, two suspected conspirators in the Sept. 11 attacks, as they attend a court hearing inside a U.S. military war crimes court at Guantanamo Bay yesterday.

Alleged planner of attacks in Gitmo military court

The accused al Qaeda mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks stood in a U.S. military court yesterday, sang a chant of praise to Allah and said he would welcome the death penalty.

"This is what I wish, to be martyred," Pakistani captive Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the highest-ranking al Qaeda operative in U.S. custody, told the Guantanamo war crimes court. He and four accused co-conspirators appeared in court at the Guantanamo Bay U.S. naval base in Cuba for the first time on charges that could result in their execution.

As the judge questioned him about whether he was satisfied with the U.S. military lawyer appointed to defend him, Mohammed stood and began to sing in Arabic, cheerfully pausing to translate his own words into English.

"My shield is Allah most high," he said, adding that his religion forbade him from accepting a lawyer from the U.S. and that he wanted to act as his own attorney.

He criticized the U.S. for fighting in Afghanistan and Iraq, waging what he called "a crusader war," and enacting illegal laws, including those authorizing same-sex marriages. REUTERS

Obama mocks health-care plan

Ban on donations from lobbyists at DNC instituted

Barack Obama enjoyed his first campaign swing as the likely Democratic presidential nominee yesterday, visiting the election battleground of Virginia to mock Republican foe John McCain's health-care proposals.

Obama, who clinched the nomination Tuesday, put his stamp on the party by instituting a new ban on donations from lobbyists at the Democratic National Committee, making it comply with the policy for his campaign.

He picked up more support from Democratic officials as the party began to rally around its new leader and look toward November's match-up with McCain. Hillary Clinton, his last remaining Democratic rival, plans to end her campaign and endorse Obama Saturday. REUTERS

Strike threat

Hargrove not ruling out action

Autoworkers blocked the road to General Motors of Canada's headquarters in Oshawa, Ont., for a second day yesterday, protesting plans to shut a truck plant as company officials and the union prepared to meet in Detroit today.

CAW President Buzz Hargrove said the union is exploring all of its options, and did not rule out a strike.

The CAW has three complaints. It said GM committed to keep the Oshawa truck plant open until the new labour agreement expires; that GM agreed to continue building hybrid pickup trucks in Oshawa; and that GM agreed to a new investment in 2011 for half-ton trucks.

wireless merger

Verizon, Alltel now biggest in U.S.

TAKEOVER A proposed $28 billion U.S. merger between Verizon Wireless and recently-privatized rival Alltel Corp. highlights the unpopularity of leveraged buyouts in a tight credit market — yet another strike against the pending $52 billion takeover of Canadian phone giant BCE Inc. The entity would create the biggest wireless provider in the United States, ahead of AT&T Inc.

A painful Olympic movement

YORK REPORT
MARTY YORK
marty.york@metronews.ca

Imagine how much better the Olympic Games could be were it not for the nitwits who run them.

What's the deal with these clowns? Why is it that the members of the International Olympic Committee can only be described with adjectives that start with the letter i? You know — irritating, ignorant, insensitive, insensible, idiotic...

One of them, someone named Gian Franco Kasper, actually was quoted as saying this in an effort to explain why women should continue to be banned from ski jumping in the Olympics: From a "medical point of view, (ski jumping is not) appropriate for ladies."

Huh?

Am I missing something here? Is there something about a female body that doesn't allow them to fly through the air as well as a male body can?

Oh, and then there was Jacques Rogge's rationale for the prohibition of women's ski jumping. Rogge is the president of the IOC and, you would suspect, intelligent. I'm afraid, however, that this is one i word that cannot be applied to him.

Women's ski jumping, Rogge said, must be excluded from the Olympics because it has only 80 competitors worldwide.

"If you have three medals, with 80 athletes competing on a regular basis internationally, the percentage of medal winners is extremely high," Rogge said. "In any another sport, you are speaking about hundreds of thousands, if not tens of millions of athletes, at a very high level, competing for one single medal. We do not want the medals to be diluted."

Thing is, Rogge's wrong. More than130 women from 16 countries are registered with the International Ski Federation. Hundreds more compete at national levels.

And Rogge's contention that "hundreds of thousands, if not tens of millions of athletes" compete at high levels in other Olympic sports? That's bull.

Has he not seen any women's ice hockey in recent years? Has he no clue about the dearth of competitive women hockey players or how women's hockey has become strictly a two-country sport? Is he unaware that Canada and the United States always meet for the gold medal?

There actually may be more formidable female ski jumpers on the planet than women hockey players. Or male badminton players. Or...

Seriously, the IOC has to smarten up and it must capitulate. It is 2008. Women deserve to ski jump in the Olympics. Period. End of story.

Sadly, women ski jumpers are suing to get in to the 2010 Games in Vancouver. You might help them by signing a petition. Check out www.wsj2010.com.

And don't forget to dot the i's.

Garcia could walk away from football

QB wants fair deal from Buccaneers

By MARTY YORK
for Metro Ottawa

Garcia

Former CFL-turned-NFL star Jeff Garcia is unhappy with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' treatment of him and is threatening to quit football.

"It's frustrating," the 38-year-old quarterback said in an interview. "If this doesn't work out and I can't get a fair contract offer renewal to finish my career, then I will seriously think about what my alternate options may be. And it may come to not playing football any more.

"I feel like when you mistreat people, there comes a time … when it's going to lead to some drastic decisions."

Garcia, a former all-star with the Calgary Stampeders, said he feels "taken advantage of." He has one year left on a contract that is scheduled to pay him $2-million US, which is below market for a quarterback who was in the Pro Bowl after last season.

Garcia said it would be "highly doubtful" that he'd ever return to the CFL.

"Not as a player," he said. "Maybe as a coach, who knows? But I can't see myself playing in the CFL again."

»sports In Brief

» BASEBALL Noel Baca III pitched a solid game yesterday, but it wasn't enough to prevent the Ottawa Rapidz from losing 2-0 to the Nashua Pride, who swept the three-game series. Baca allowed just two hits, one unearned run with three strikeouts and two walks, but took the loss.

» MLB The Tampa Bay Rays selected shortstop Tim Beckham with the No. 1 pick in the 2008 player draft yesterday. Beckham, an 18-year-old from Griffin, Ga., was ranked the top high school prospect by Baseball America going into the draft.

» CFL The Toronto Argonauts added help at running back by acquiring Jamal Robertson in a trade yesterday with the Roughriders. The Argos sent cornerback Leron Mitchell to Saskatchewan after learning that regular running back Tyler Ebell requires season-ending surgery after injuring his ankle on Wednesday.

Death Cab For Cutie hits No. 1 with Narrow Stairs

By IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Ottawa

Death Cab For Cutie's new disc Narrow Stairs debuted at No. 1 on the album chart last month.

Profile LIKE A NUMBER of 20th century writers and artists who sought inspiration while visiting the isolated central California locale of Big Sur, Death Cab For Cutie front man Ben Gibbard had hoped to seek similar enlightenment whilst writing songs for Narrow Stairs, the band's seventh studio album, which reached the No. 1 spot on the Billboard 200 album chart.

Instead, the 32-year-old came away rather disillusioned. "I guess I was expecting some kind of profundity to hit me. I wanted to project some kind of transcendence of being in this place," Gibbard tells Metro, noting that he wanted to follow in the proverbial footsteps of his literary idol Jack Kerouac, who holed himself up in a cabin at Big Sur to pen his 1960s novel of the same name. "For me, I felt foolish expecting some kind of answer by making a pilgrimage to this place that belonged to one of my heroes."

Along with the disillusionment expressed on Bixby Canyon Bridge, Narrow Stairs also explores the regrets of a bride who winds up marrying the wrong beau (Cath...), the woes of a chum's relationship breakup (Your New Twin-Sized Bed) and goes a step creepier into relaying the controlling mind of a stalker (I Will Possess Your Heart). That's not to say the Washington State-based quartet operates under a cloud of total doom and gloom. Quite the contrary: Gibbard points out that he, guitarist/producer Chris Walla, bassist Nick Harmer and drummer Jason McGerr were happy enough to try and push new boundaries.

The most notable form of enlightenment comes from first single I Will Possess Your Heart, eight minutes and 31 seconds long, with vocals appearing nearly five minutes in. An edited four-and-a-half minute version was released to appease most radio programmers, but Gibbard notes "more stations are playing the longer version."

Album leaks fuel paranoia

THE MUSIC GEEK
ALAN CROSS
alan@ongoinghistory.com

Beck is paranoid. I know this because I'm jammed into the middle seat, one row from the toilets, on a wretched American airliner heading to Los Angeles.

Adding to my hell is the tubby Midwestern seatmate who won't stop talking about how excited he is to be visiting the back lot at Universal Studios. I consider telling him about the fire, but after about 20 minutes of him burbling about Back To The Future, I figure he deserves the surprise.

Beck's paranoia surrounds the release of his new album, tentatively titled Modern Guilt. With CD sales on a supersonic vector downwards, timing the appearance of a new album has never been more critical. It must not — cannot — appear online before it gets a chance to be shipped to stores. Nothing ruins careful marketing plans like an album leak. And when marketing plans are derailed, sales crater.

Take Weezer's Red Album, which came out this past Tuesday. It wasn't supposed to be released until June 24th. But sometime on May 7 — the day after the band finished pre-release interviews with journalists (including me) — it showed up on a variety of torrent sites, forcing the band, their management and their label into some serious damage control. No one knows who leaked it online, but given how careful the Weezer people were with the demo disc, it had to be some kind of weird inside job. We'll see what happens with first week sales when the numbers are released on Wednesday.

A few days later, I heard the new Coldplay album, Viva la Vida, at a private listening room set up by their label, EMI. After my cellphone was confiscated, a burly dude in a security uniform wanded me as if I might have C4 wrapped in tinfoil around my chest. I almost expected him to X-ray my shoes. Would someone go to a listening session wearing a wire? Maybe. That's how paranoid EMI is about new Coldplay music going over the wall.

Beck is being even more careful. The only listening session will be held in the L.A. offices of his manager, John Silva — hence my current air-travel hell. Knowing John — whose other clients include the Foo Fighters and Jimmy Eat World — security will be super-tight. I wouldn't be surprised if I'm fingerprinted and asked for a DNA sample. Or maybe I'm just paranoid.

Martha Wainwright

Album: I Know You're Married But I've Got Feelings Too
Label: MapleMusic/Universal
Release Date: June 3

MONTREAL'S MARTHA WAINWRIGHT is no stranger to fans of her famous brother, Rufus — she sang backup for him for years — but the rest of Canada hasn't yet embraced the engaging singer-songwriter. That is, until now. Her sophomore album is easily one of the better discs to hit stores this year. It's emotional, passionate, catchy and complex, and blows her debut record out of the water. Standout tracks include the folky acoustic number Bleeding All Over Me and the Broadway musical-ish Tower Song.

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI

Aimee Mann

Album: @#%&*! Smilers
Label: Burgundy/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

TWO THINGS YOU can generally rely on as far as this L.A. singer-songwriter vet is concerned: Quality writing and tuneful arrangements. Mann replaces her previous bitter bantering and conceptual works with straightforward, melancholy-laden character sketches about insecurity (the semi-autobiographical Thirty One Today), troubled personalities (Medicine Wheel, Little Tornados), addictions (Columbus Ave., Freeway) and loves lost (Phoenix). Album No. 7 might not grab one's immediate attention in the vein of Mann's earlier efforts (1996's I'm With Stupid, for instance); rather, it's an unfolding process that ultimately rewards upon subsequent listens.

Release Date: June 3

EVER SINCE NEWFOUNDLAND-based six-piece Hey Rosetta! released their EP last year, people have been waiting for their next move. Luckily for them, their full-length debut delivers. Into Your Lungs combines introspective acoustics with hard driving rock 'n' roll — think Matthew Good-meets-Hawksley Workman (he produced the record) — while violin, piano and cello fill out the sound. The songs are solid, but they're also a little long with several tunes at least five minutes long. With a little editing, these Newfies should hit it big.

RIVERS CUOMO AND company remain relevant by taking geeky pokes at sacred cows like teen rebellion (Troublemaker) and Timbaland (Pork and Beans). Even the Red Hot Chili Peppers and The Rolling Stones get a few shots in Everybody Get Dangerous. Parts of this self-titled album (forever to be known as the red one) are hilarious. Others are deeply touching, like Cuomo's unabashed admission that Gordon Lightfoot, Michael Jackson and (gag) Debbie Gibson wrote some of his "Heartsongs."

The Ting Tings

Album: We Started Nothing
Label: Columbia/Sony BMG
Release Date: June 3

IF THERE'S A SUREFIRE way to make money in today's iTunes age, it's by writing an entire album of singles. That's exactly what new U.K. buzz band The Ting Tings have done — their new disc boasts 10 wildly infectious tunes that could all wind up topping radio charts. The record is perfect for single-song downloaders, but it's too over the top for those who covet full records. The duo's high energy tunes and repetitive shouts are fun, but hard to stomach after a few spins.

Jewel

Album: Perfectly Clear
Label: The Valory Music Co./Open Road/Universal
Release Date: June 3

AT LEAST THE country genre better suits this Alaska-born songstress than her 2003 faux pop tart misstep, 0304. Plus, Jewel's voice — both as sweet singer and occasional yodeller— and acoustic guitar stylings of her singer-songwriter past mesh naturally with the overall feel of this seventh studio album. All the right elements are in place: The piano-dominant title cut's a promising heartbroken update to past hit Foolish Games; the soft, bouncy Love Is A Garden shows potential as the next You Were Meant For Me. It's a shame, though, the remainder of Perfectly Clear comes off as perfectly bland and forgettable.

IAN NATHANSON

Gavin Rossdale

Album: Wanderlust
Label: Interscope/Universal
Release Date: June 3

UBER-EARNEST RADIO rock from the former front man of Bush. Formulaic power chords and goopy, synthetic lyrics (how can anyone seriously record a song these days called Forever May You Run?). Not even mega producer Bob Rock could save this turkey. Rossdale is probably best known now for being married to Gwen Stefani and so he shall remain.

Kung Fu Panda cast kicks up real laughs

Kung Fu Panda
Stars Jack Black, Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie
Director Mark Osborne John Stevenson
PG

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Ottawa

REVIEW BEFORE WE BEGIN, let's get the clichés out of the way — yes, everybody is Kung Fu Fighting in Kung Fu Panda and yes, a cover of Carl Douglas' one-hit wonder 1974 track of the same name features on the film's soundtrack.

But that's where the clichés end. Co-directors John Stevenson and Mark Osborne have carefully adhered to the conventions of the martial arts genre without exploiting them, opting instead to pay homage to the movies of their youth with the use of animation and Jack Black's very appropriate brand of humour.

Kung Fu Panda introduces us to Po (Be Kind Rewind's Black), a lazy panda who dreams of one day becoming a martial arts master, but is simply too fat and lazy to make it happen.

That is until he one day makes his way to a nearby temple to witness the crowning of the next 'chosen one' destined to hold the title of master, only to find himself tagged with the honour, much to the chagrin of the crusty guru Shifu (Stranger Than Fiction's Dustin Hoffman). The future of China — which just happens to be populated by talking animals — rests in Po's paws as he begins training with Shifu's pupils: Master Monkey (Rush Hour 3's Jackie Chan), Master Tigress (Beowulf's Angelina Jolie), Master Viper (Watching The Detectives' Lucy Liu), Master Mantis (Superbad's Seth Rogen) and Master Crane (Arrested Development's David Cross). Matters become more pressing when it's learned that the evil Tai Lung (Hot Rod's Ian McShane) has escaped from prison and is ready for a showdown with Shifu.

Shifu (voiced by Dustin Hoffman) in Kung Fu Panda.

The comedy, if you hadn't guessed, is derived from an overweight panda trying to master kung fu. For this, Black is the perfect choice to voice Po, a character built almost solely around the actor's manic delivery.

The rest of the casting is also spot-on — yes, even Dustin Hoffman as an aging warrior — while the fight scenes are spectacular.

And although those scenes are full of laughs, they're also carefully designed to present kung fu in a realistic fashion utilizing genuine fighting styles. As per Stevenson and Osborne's directions, the fights drive the story from start to finish, while Yong Duk Jhun's cinematography and the film's fantastic animation bring China to life in a way we've never seen before. Kids will love watching a dumb panda fumbling around as he tries to save his village from destruction of a sinister snow leopard.

Sandler-izing Middle East tensions

You Don't Mess with the Zohan

Stars Adam Sandler, John Turturro
Director Dennis Dugan
14A

By RICK MCGINNIS
for Metro Ottawa

REVIEW NO ONE is expecting a treatise on the crisis in the Middle East from Adam Sandler, but the comedian has assumed the role of lightning rod just by setting his film amidst the war that inevitably defeats anyone who says they can solve it.

Sandler plays the title role in the film, a sort of Israeli James Bond with a secret dream of styling hair in New York City, who fakes his death and goes off to live his blow-dried, '80s-inspired dream.

Sandler plays Zohan with an Israeli accent so painstakingly bad that it becomes its own joke, as does the film's barrage of Hebrew and Arab slang, most of it invented.

Needless to say, most of these newly minted words are euphemisms for breasts, erections, or the sexual act; if Sandler does have any hidden political agenda, it just might be dragging a conflict that's frequently described as an obscenity down to the level of real smuttiness.

Rejected by Paul Mitchell's Manhattan salon, Zohan ends up in the boroughs, on a street where Jewish and Muslim businesses sit side by side, cutting hair in a struggling hair salon owned by a pretty Palestinian (Emmanuelle Chriqui), making his reputation by servicing his elderly female clients with the casual hedonism that's supposed to be a hallmark of Tel Aviv club culture.

His idyllic exile ends when he's recognized by an Arab cab driver (the inevitable Rob Schneider) who passes the news on to The Phantom (John Turturro), his Palestinian nemesis.

There's an evil real estate developer, a big showdown and cameos from Mariah Carey, Chris Rock, John McEnroe and George Takei.

At the end, Sandler imagines that we'd all get along a whole lot better by forgetting our differences and — at least for guys — concentrating on the things that unite us, like sports, consumer electronics, and debates about who we'd rather tap — Hillary or Chelsea. If only it were that simple.

Adam Sandler plays a Mossad agent-turned-hairstylist in You Don't Mess With The Zohan, opening today.

Celeb obsessions take flight

Angel

Stars Romola Garai, Sam Neill
Director François Ozon

14A

By STEVE GOW
for Metro Ottawa

The adaption of the 1957 novel Angel hits the big screen today.

REVIEW ALTHOUGH HER story is set in the early 1900s, Angel Deverell would fit right into today's celebrity-obsessed culture. After all, never has there been a time when so much emphasis has been placed on touching the elusive brass ring of fame regardless of merit. I mean, have you heard of Tila Tequila?

In this adaptation of the popular 1957 novel Angel, Romola Garai (Atonement) stars as the above-noted Ms. Deverell — the bratty daughter of a poor shopkeeper who believes she's entitled to fortunes just because she can churn out fantastical, but less than brilliant, romance novels by the kilderkin. After she gets published and becomes an overnight smash, Angel sets out, at any cost, to create the dreamlike world she's always imagined — while living in a mansion called "Paradise" no less.

With an especially over-the-top style that includes obvious back-screen projection techniques straight out of the 50's (possibly highlighting the superficiality of Angel's bliss), filmmaker François Ozon (Swimming Pool) creates a captivating portrait of a self-obsessed woman clinging to false ambition even as the walls fall in around her.

Garai gives an unrelenting, unsympathetic performance that may not provide the fairytale princess these types of period pieces so often deliver, but that is the point: Ungrounded stardom does not guarantee respect or a love and life fulfilled. Are you listening, Tila?

Jack and the Kung Fu Panda

All thanks go to Black for getting movie made

By GLEN MILLER
for Metro Ottawa

FEATURE FEEL-GOOD STORY. Top-shelf animation. An all-star production team behind the scenes. And a struggle to get it made.

After four-plus years in production, the journey for Kung Fu Panda has ended with an uplifting family film that has a good shot of attaining the "classic" branding that will serve it well for years to come.

So it's a good thing that Jack Black finally gave his OK to accept the lead voiceover role of panda Po.

Otherwise producer Melissa Cobb would probably still be waiting to get the DreamWorks film completed. It opens in theatres today.

"He was the only person we could think of (for the Po role) but he said no a few times because he was busy or he wasn't in a place (mindset) where he wanted to do it," Cobb said at a press conference in Los Angeles.

Joining Black in the voiceover cast are two-time Academy award winner Dustin Hoffman, Angelina Jolie, Lucy Liu and Jackie Chan. Might be some box-office appeal there.

After a full-out, last-ditch sales pitch by co-director John Stevenson, who showed Black an animation of the Po character speaking dialogue from his role in the School of Rock to bait Black, the chase for the star finally became the catch.

Once committed, as Black explains it, there was little preparation or research to do because he says the role is essentially him in his real life: a little chubby, in awe of his heroes growing up and always dreaming of bigger things.

The story begins with Po wanting to leave his father's noodle shop and somehow find a way to be a kung fu star, joining the ranks of his fighting heroes called the Furious Five.

From that group must come the new Dragon Warrior who must have the goods to fend off the most menacing warrior in the land, snow leopard Tai Lung.

With determination, Po gets himself on track to be his own hero.

In the beginning, Po doesn't figure that he has the body or the mind to get anywhere.

With the engaging tug of war with his mentor, Master Shifu (Hoffman), the student and master learn a few things about each other and themselves. Under the direction of Stevenson and co-director Mark Osborne, the production had the mandate of honoring the martial arts genre and the Chinese culture.

There's lots of humour, but parody got the boot. So did any pop culture references.

"We did tons and tons of research," said Osborne. "It was very important for us to honor the culture of kung fu."

Jack Black plays Po, a lazy panda bear, in Kung Fu Panda

JACK ATTACK

- Jack Black says he took martial arts training (judo and karate) in his youth. But he took no kung fu training. As he told a reporter: "I can defend myself. If you came at me, I could flip ya."

Film is an unknown gem

The Unknown Woman
Stars Kseniya Rappoport
Director Giuseppe Tornatore
18A

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Ottawa

REVIEW IT'S TOO early to make any steadfast declarations, but director Giuseppe Tornatore's The Unknown Woman may turn out to be one of the best foreign films of the year.

It will definitely not be one of the most hopeful.

The subtitled Italian language story centres around a former Ukrainian prostitute named Irena (Russian actress Kseniya Rappoport) who has fled her pimp and moved to Italy where she begins seeking out the girl she thinks could be her daughter. As she became pregnant over the years, the pimp would take her children from her or force her to have abortions, but Irena thinks a young girl named Thea may be the last child to whom she gave birth.

To gain access to the girl, Irena takes a job as the girl's nanny and slowly builds trust with the family, that is until her past comes back to haunt her and Irena finds herself once again enveloped by hopelessness and despair.

Again, this is not the type of film for those looking for an uplifting night at the cinema. Rappoport is fantastic as the troubled Irena and carries the film from start to finish with a mysterious performance that keeps the audience guessing as to her character's origins, motivations and her next move. The script, by Tornatore (Malena) and Massimo De Rita, examines the plight of an abused woman and her desperate efforts to regain the only piece of her past that matters — her child — in brilliant detail.

Scene from The Unknown Woman.

Tornatore's direction throughout is superb with virtually no breaks in suspense over the course of the film's two hour run-time. If not for Rappoport, however, the film could have easily failed. It takes a strong actor to make the emotional commitment to bring a story such as this one to life.

She accomplishes the feat with seeming ease.

Expect to see The Unknown Woman on a few 'best of' lists by the end of the year.

Quote OF THE WEEK

"People forget your flaws and imperfections if they see you're happy. From the outside, it seems like we have great lives but there are pressures, such as lack of time, being chased by the paparazzi and being criticized all the time. We'd sit there and moan to each other and then after a few hours I'd burst out laughing because, ultimately, we both love our jobs and are incredibly privileged to have these lives."

— Sienna Miller to MSN Entertainment about Keira Knightley and herself when filming The Edge Of Love.

INDIANA JONES AND THE KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL

★★★★ (out of 5)

Film fans will be hard-pressed not to smile when they hear John Williams' famed score and see that trademark fedora make its first big-screen appearance in 19 years, in a re-introduction to the greatest adventure character of all time. While the dialogue plods at times and a few scenes are more than a little far-fetched, The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull is pure blockbuster joy.

IRON MAN

★★★★ (out of 5)

Robert Downey Jr. as Iron Man, a.k.a. arms dealer turned good guy Tony Stark, proves he's one of today's best character actors. With a great supporting cast (Jeff Bridges, Gwyneth Paltrow), thrilling action sequences and funny dialogue, Iron Man is a welcome return to the comic book movie genre.

SEX AND THE CITY

The feature adaptation of Sex And The City is among the year's most highly-anticipated films. The film catches up with Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker), Miranda (Cynthia Nixon), Samantha (Kim Cattrall) and Charlotte (Kristin Davis) four years after the TV series finale. Problems arise — someone has an affair, someone gets jilted, and communication issues threaten to tear up the foursome. It can all be sorted out with endless conversation and shopping.

Liv Tyler (Lord of the Rings) and Scott Speedman (Weirdsville) are harassed by a group of mask-wearing oddballs in the middle of the night. Although the plot doesn't sound too shockingly original, what first-time writer/director Bryan Bertino accomplishes is an incredibly calculated, intense suspense picture wrought with themes of fate and circumstance.

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS ★⇨⇨⇨

Jack (Ashton Kutcher) and Joy (Cameron Diaz) get hitched one boozy Vegas night. The morning-after annulment is cancelled when he hits a $3-million jackpot with her quarter. Now they're stuck with each other for the sake of the dough. A promising start can't save this ordinary, slightly offensive film.

Mad Men to make leap forward?

IDIOT BOX

RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

TRULY MADLY: The first season of Mad Men — AMC's surprise hit — is getting a replay on CTV here starting this Sunday, in anticipation of season two's debut on the A Channel in the fall, and the DVD box set of season one is due out next month, which would probably explain why you can't throw an empty Johnny Walker Black bottle around here without hitting an ad or cover story about the show.

Flawed and inconsistent, even unbelievable, Mad Men has a pointedly selective take on the period when it's set — the button-down, pre-Beatles early '60s, with its booze-swilling, philandering adults, cigarette-smoking pregnant moms and silent, seething youth. I love the show, flaws and all, which is why I can't help but be intrigued by the season two rumours escaping from the set around now.

Late last week, USA Today ran a piece in which creator Matthew Weiner said that the second season will take place after what seems to be a popular trend in TV dramas — a leap forward in time. Shows such as Lost, Battlestar Galactica and Desperate Housewives have all hit the fast-forward button to spin their wheels and accelerate forward out of sticky dramatic spots, but Weiner says that Mad Men's leapfrog won't be a big one:

"The world has changed a little bit, but the stories will involve two things: One is that you have to live with the consequences of your actions, and (the other is) people don't change," he says. Viewers "will be seeing their old friends, but they will have new problems."

All the main players from season one are in place when season two begins, but Weiner says that "you will know that something different has happened." With the Bay of Pigs and the Cuban Missile Crisis to help colour the background — I can't wait to see how Weiner handles Kennedy's assassination — Mad Men has a lot to play with before the first kid comes home from college with long hair and a copy of Rubber Soul and a few of the younger guys at Sterling Cooper get together to smoke some tea instead of swilling scotch to try and get a feel for the youth market.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Cattrall to star in Canadian cartoon

Cattrall

SEX AND THE CITY co-star Kim Cattrall has joined the voice cast of the Canadian cartoon satire Producing Parker, which will premiere on Canada's E! network next year.

Cattrall will play the self-absorbed, high-maintenance host of "The Dee Show," a daytime talk show that sells viewers on the myth of having it all. E! has ordered 13 half-hours of the animated comedy, which sends up the daytime talk show genre.

School Crush

Penélope Cruz dazzles as the temptress who seduces her older professor in Elegy.

By Denis Seguin
Contributing Writer

Penélope Cruz casually enters the room, thumb-scrolling on her BlackBerry. Next, she pulls out a Marlboro and asks "¿Alguien tiene fuego?" which is a sexy way of saying "Anyone got a light?" The good news? It seems that she's a regular human being, vices and all.

Now for the bad news: Cruz doesn't dish — even if the question posed is purely hypothetical. Like whether she could ever imagine having a love affair with a man more than 40 years her senior — a fair question, seeing as it lies at the heart of her new movie, Elegy.

Based on the Philip Roth novel The Dying Animal and brilliantly adapted and directed by Isabel Coixet, the film stars Ben Kingsley as a Manhattan sophisticate who falls in love with one of his students. Cruz plays Consuela, a mature student who becomes the object of his desire and then the eye of his hurricane.

"I think Philip Roth is a genius," says Cruz. "He makes you understand all the characters — even the ones you don't like and the ones that make the biggest mistakes. You understand them — you understand their fears. He's a very honest writer. I believed the story, and I connected with it."

FACE VALUE

Her enviable figure may have earned her the nickname "The Body," but now that Elle Macpherson is Revlon's newest global ambassador, her face is taking centre stage. The 45-year-old kicks off her role this fall in advertisements for the company's latest cosmetics campaign. (Gucci Westman, Revlon's new artistic director, will do her makeup.) But off-camera, her beauty regimen is decidedly low-key. "I believe that beauty comes from the inside," says the mother of two. "I spend more time having a good laugh with my kids than I do looking in the mirror."

TREND OF THE MONTH

SEA CHANGE

Make a splash with shades of aqua shadow — this season's fresh take on the smoky eye. To dive into this seaworthy trend (seen at the Cristian Luppi and Trussardi shows), blend a shimmery shadow from lash line to crease, then anchor the look with black mascara and eyeliner. Pair it with a vivid coral mouth.

Sophie goes the natural route

Sophie Gregoire Trudeau, Quebec correspondent for eTalk airing weeknights on CTV:

Q What products make you look and feel good?

A Water, water, and water (tap NEVER bottled)! And then, any organic bathing soaps, natural shea butter, Dermalogica products, Aveda night nutrients, and my SPF 30 for the face and body.

Q Describe your style.

A I never know the answer to this question. I would describe my style, natural as possible. Be yourself. Feel free in your clothes. Wear what you like. Be careful with trends.

Q What is your regular fitness routine?

A I take African dance classes once a week. I walk uphill every morning with my son Xavier in his stroller on Mount Royal through a beautiful cemetery.

Q What is your daily meal and beverage plan?

A I LOVE to cook and eat. I'll try anything. I even tried bat meat ... once, never twice. I buy organic and local as much as possible. I do love a good glass of wine and dark chocolate. I sometimes crave McDonald's poutine and steamed hot dogs.

Q Do you prefer to prepare your meals or eat out?

A I prefer to prepare my meals and eat at home. I have a very busy lifestyle and a husband in politics. So when out, we try to eat healthy.

Q What is the philosophy you live by?

A Life is serious, you don't have to be. Open yourself to others. Love with all your heart and soul.

Festival showcases 40 performances

By KIM MANNIX VERMETTE
for Metro Ottawa

Profile AS VIBRANT as it is to watch, eliciting both physical and emotional responses from those in the audience, contemporary dance is the kind of art form that's often approached with trepidation.

But according to Noora Sagarwala, company manager of the Canada Dance Festival which kicks off in Ottawa tomorrow, dance is really one the most accessible art forms of all.

"I think one of the best things about dance is that it can communicate with everyone. It doesn't matter what language you speak, or if you're knowledgeable about the intricacies of the styles — when you watch someone dance you can't help but react emotionally." says Sagarwala. "Sometimes you even feel your own muscles moving in response, and leave a performance wanting to dance too."

details

» The Canada Dance Festival runs from June 7-15 at various venues in Ottawa and Gatineau. For schedule and ticket information visit canadadance.ca.

For those who'd rather watch than participate, the Canada Dance festival provides more than 40 performances, with hundreds of dancers in a variety of styles — from ballet to jazz, modern styles and even breakdancing.

Sagarwala says some of it will be beautiful and graceful, while other performances may challenge your senses. What she is also excited about is how many different spaces will be used across Ottawa-Gatineau, including traditional venues like the National Arts Centre and Museum of Civilization, as well as outdoor spaces like Brewer Park across from Carleton University.

The park will be the site of the Hip Hop 360 block party on June 15, a kind of festival within the festival that will showcase the talents of breakdancers, emcees, DJs and graffiti artists from near and far.

Sagarwala is also artistic director of the Hip Hop 360 portion of the festival, and originated the event last summer in Ottawa. She says it's an important way to recognize the artistic contributions of b-boys and b-girls, and also gives those involved a chance to celebrate and exchange ideas with others.

"Because it's an underground culture, it's sometimes divided. I think it's important to note that having urban artists be part of a huge festival like this shows that this is more than just street dancing — it's an art," Sagarwala says.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

Dancers from Cas Public and Ruth Cansfield Dance companies will be amongst more than 100 dancers and choreographers coming to Ottawa.

Heather Ritchie, marketing director of the Canada Dance Festival, says because the festival only happens every two years, people should take the opportunity to see the best dancers and choreographers in the country. "This is not just a chance for people to see some amazing performances — it's a huge industry event as well, where the dancers, choreographers can learn from another and showcase their work to presenters. There is just this exciting buzz and energy for the entire festival."

Intergovernmental affair slips between the sheets

It's a sunny weekday, mid-afternoon and Todd Duckworth says he's sorry if he sounds groggy. He's just awoken from a nap.

The veteran Ottawa actor isn't just the lover of a post-lunch siesta — he's catching up on some lost sleep, and making sure he's ready for the evening performance. The star of Plan B, the Great Canadian Theatre Company's final show of the season, nearly had to bow out of the play after undergoing surgery for a serious infection in his knee.

"Unfortunately it hit me right at a critical time about two-thirds of the way into rehearsals — pretty late in the game to get anyone else in. I was leaving the hospital during the day to go to rehearsal, then going back at night," Duckworth candidly explains. "There were a nervous couple of days, but I think when you tell yourself 'you have no choice. You are doing this,' your body comes around and you just do it."

Taking the old saying 'the show must go on' to heart, Duckworth has been performing a rigorous role nightly in the three-hour plus political satire by writer Michael Healy.

His character, Michael Fraser, is the finance minister of Canada during the mid-1990s, and at the height of the French-English debate in Canada. He — and other political players such as Quebec's intergovernmental affairs minister, played by Annick Léger, a senator from Saskatchewan played by John Koensgen and the premier of Quebec played by Paul Rainville — all engage in meetings and debates about the situation.

But, this being a comical farce, there is much going on behind the scenes, and between the sheets, as Duckworth's character and Leger's character have their own kind of intergovernmental affair. "It makes you wonder are the relations between English and French Canada a metaphor for our relationship, or is it the other way around? I think it's a bit of both. It weaves back and forth seamlessly and is a very cleverly written play," he says.

details

» GCTC's production of Plan B runs through June 15 at the Irving Greenberg Theatre Centre. For tickets and times call 613-236-5196 or visit gctc.ca.

And, even when he's not engaging in bedroom politics, Duckworth says his character has a penchant for removing his pants. Is that a challenging feat when one has a pain-stricken, post-operative knee to contend with? Are Velcro, tear-away pants employed? "No, no Velcro. It was tricky at first, but once I discovered I could take off the pants without taking off my shoes, it got easier," he says with a laugh.

After covering hard news for a few years, Kim discovered her real passion – writing about the wonderful world of music, theatre, visual arts and literature.

Resolutions for a green year

A simple way to go green is to stop buying books — borrow them from the public library instead.

Make a difference with lifestyle changes

By MARTY YORK
for Metro Ottawa

It's all so simple, really, this concept of going green. The objective is to live happy, healthy lives and save the planet.

By now, we're all familiar with what we need to do in general.

Reduce, reuse, recycle. Buy less. Burn less oil. Pollute less. Eat better. Plan better. Think better.

And so on and so on.

But what can we do specifically to go green throughout the year and help achieve our objectives?

Below are some suggestions from environmental experts:

DRIVE LESS: Walk or bike whenever possible. Take public transit. Carpool. And, if you absolutely must drive, use an energy-efficient vehicle or convert to alternative fuels like ethanol or biodiesel.

USE ENERGY-EFFICIENT APPLIANCES: You should also only run your dishwasher when it's fully loaded. And don't forget energy-efficient lightbulbs.

TAKE SHORTER SHOWERS: Or baths. Use less hot water.

USE LESS PAPER: The third largest industrial emitter of global warming pollution is the pulp and paper industry. Use paper made from post-consumer waste, and, of course, recycle your newspapers.

One way to go green is to walk — or bike, or take public transit — to work.

RID YOURSELF OF JUNK MAIL: Tell whoever's mailing you this stuff to stop and to not sell, exchange or give your information to other commercial interests.

REDUCE PRINTER USAGE: Don't toss old faxes, reports and letters. Put them in your printer face up and print on their blank side.

CLOSE YOUR DOORS: This will reduce the need to turn up the heat or air conditioning. Don't set your thermostat too high when it's cold or too low when it's warm.

BAG LESS: Don't use specially bought plastic bags. Line your kitchen garbage container with newspaper. (Not Metro, hehe.) When you shop, bring your own tote bag and reject plastic bags stores offer.

USE THE SUN: Go back to clotheslines to dry your clothes instead of those gas-guzzling and electric dryers.

TURN OFF COMPUTERS: And pull chargers out of the wall when not using them. Maximize your CPU settings, like the sleep mode, to reduce energy use.

USE THE PUBLIC LIBRARY: Stop buying so many books.

SAY NO TO STYROFOAM: If it's sold in Styrofoam, just don't buy it. Styrofoam isn't recycled; it never biodegrades.

Turn your mobile phone into a tree.

We give where we live. Bring any mobile phone in to your local TELUS store for recycling, and we'll plant a tree. Working in partnership with Tree Canada, thousands of our team members will plant trees in communities across the country on our annual TELUS Day of Service. Last year, our Return & Recycle Program collected over 40,000 phones. Let's make those numbers grow. For more information please visit telus.com/recycling Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants.

water-saving tips

» Use a broom rather than a water hose to clean walkways, driveways and sidewalks.
» Collect and use your rainwater for your lawn and plants. It's free and better for your plants.
» Avoid cleaners containing phosphates. When they get into rivers and lakes they cause algae blooms, robbing the water of oxygen and ultimately killing aquatic life.
» Fix that leaking hose and dripping nozzle. It will help keep your shoes and shirt dry and save water.
» Keep the septic system working smoothly! Pour 250 ml baking soda down any toilet or drain once a week. Baking soda creates a favourable pH environment for optimal bacterial action.
» Install water-saving showerheads.
» Don't run the water when you brush teeth, shave, wash dishes, or clean vegetables.

Litter 'everywhere': Ocean Net founder

By JON TATTRIE
for Metro Ottawa

Robert O'Brien, founder of Ocean Net.

Sailing home to Newfoundland after 35 years in Toronto, Robert O'Brien was struck by the beauty of the coastal landscape — and the filthy mess wrapped round it like a noose.

It was 1997, and O'Brien was sailing in a flotilla to commemorate the 500th anniversary of John Cabot's arrival in North America, but what he was seeing was a shocking display of what has happened to the waters since then.

"It's everywhere, ocean litter. It's frightening," the self-made businessman says, adding that most of it comes off boats — about 80 per cent from fishing boats.

He was disgusted — and inspired to found Ocean Net, a grassroots organization dedicated to cleaning up coastlines through volunteer work. Today, it boasts more than 25,000 members in 2,000 communities across Newfoundland who take to the shore at least once a year, garbage bags in hand.

"Sometimes we do it twice a year, with all the litter coming off the ocean. You wonder where it comes from. Where did that mattress come from?" he muses about one particularly strange find. "It was a single mattress. Maybe someone had it on a boat.

"Someone has to take stewardship of the environment," he explains. "You're only one person, but you know, even if you recycled or composted, you reduce your human footprint. If we all did that, we could reduce our footprint by 75 per cent."

He quotes his friend and fellow Canadian Environment Award honoree Jon Lien: "God help me if something happened to the environment while I was on watch."

O'Brien, honoured with a Hometown Hero environmental award last year, points to Ocean Net Day as a proud achievement. Held in Newfoundland the third Friday of September, it focuses attention on beaches — and the perennial need to clean them.

"It's exciting to be recognized," he says of the Canadian Environment Award. "It's exhausting, doing this. When you receive any kind of recognition or a pat on the back, you say, 'Well, it's not in vain. There is a God out there!'"

"Our strength is our people," says Mary Coxworthy, Ocean Net's executive director. "People here have pride in their local beaches, and all we have to do is steer them in the right direction. We're making everyone a steward for the shorelines of Newfoundland and Labrador."

Coral reefs, helping climate focus of this year's Ocean's Day

First proposed by Canada at the 1992 UN Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro, in many countries Ocean's Day — which is on Sunday — is essentially an annual beach-cleaning fest. This year, the theme is "Helping our climate/helping our ocean" with extra attention paid to the impact on coral reefs as it coincides with the UN-sponsored International Year of the Reef. Canada's Department of Fisheries and Oceans has an activities poster to help coastal Canadians take some grassroots action (www.theoceanproject.org).

Ocean's Day also kicks off the start of Rivers to Oceans week, which runs until June 14. It's a fusion of Canadian Rivers Day, celebrated since 2003, and Ocean's Day. This year, the focus is on Canada's North, largely because about 60 per cent of Canada's fresh water drains north, and the safety of that water supply is under strain due to increased development and shipping traffic, not to mention the threat posed by global climate change of a vast ice-melt.

This year, Rivers to Oceans week coincides with the Bicentennial reenactment of the historic journey of the voyageurs of the David Thompson Brigade. On www.2008thompsonbrigade.com, you can track the progress of the canoes, manned by 160 hardy souls who are paddling across four provinces on their 63-day journey, which will cover 3,600 kilometres and end on July 12.

Jessica's dad behind split: Report

Singer Jessica Simpson's father Joe has brought her relationship with football player Tony Romo to the brink and was the main source behind their split in May, usmagazine.com reports.

A source told Us Joe asked Romo, 28, to drop his agent so he could take over his NFL career and $67.5-million US contract.

He even offered to broker a deal to sell his engagement and wedding to a magazine should Romo and Jessica, 27, get engaged.

"'If you guys have a marriage, I can do the same (sell it) that I did with Ashlee,'" a source quoted Joe as saying.

As tension grew, the Dallas Cowboys quarterback reportedly gave Jessica an ultimatum: Tell dad to back off.

When asked for comment by Us, Joe defended himself, telling Us, "It's unfair to criticize me for what every manager does for his or her clients."

Charlize talks marriage

Charlize Theron has never yearned to get married, and insists she has no plans to tie the knot with boyfriend of seven years Stuart Townsend, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The couple has been subject to numerous marriage rumours throughout their long romance, but maintain they are as close and committed as any married couple, and have no plans to change their situation.

The actress tells the July issue of Glamour magazine, "Even when I was a little girl I never dreamed of the white dress and all of that. I want to be clear: I am not judgmental about marriage. I am judgmental about how our government doesn't want to see the reality of gay and lesbian marriages."

Married or not, Theron insists maintaining a long relationship requires effort. The Oscar winner adds, "I think if you are in a one or two-year relationship, love is enough. You can thrive on that. When you hit years three and four, you realize that if you're going to live with somebody ... you have to be nurtured emotionally and spiritually, and you have to be intrigued.

Because if that intrigue runs out, you're not going to want to go home anymore."

Jim credits boy with love lesson

Actor Jim Carrey credits the autistic son of his girlfriend Jenny McCarthy with teaching him how to love, imdb.com reports.

Carrey spoke out during a march in Washington D.C. on Wednesday, to raise awareness of the presence of toxins in vaccines, which McCarthy claims was the cause of five-year-old son Evan's condition.

Carrey, also accompanied by his 20-year-old daughter, Jane, said, "He taught me how to love. And without Evan I might never have seen the greatness of Jenny's spirit. (Jenny is) the source of all that is good (in my life)."

Liv may want hubby back

Five weeks after announcing her separation from rocker Royston Langdon, actress Liv Tyler is having second thoughts, starmagazine.com reports.

Tyler "is desperately sad and thinks she may have made the mistake of a lifetime," says a source. "She now feels that no matter how bad it was, they can still make it work."

After hearing from pals like actress Gwyneth Paltrow that marriage requires hard work, Liv, 30, has tried to reach out to Langdon, 36, to see if they can patch things up. So far, no luck.

The couple, who wed in 2003, have a son, Milo, 3.

Antics embarrass Lily

Pop star Lily Allen is ashamed of her behaviour at a London awards show on Tuesday, insisting she feels "awful" about her raucous actions, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The singer, 23, turned heads with her bright pink hair at the Glamour Women of the Year Awards, where she was presented with the Editor's Special Award.

She was pictured at the start of the night looking elegant in a pale pink off-the-shoulder dress, but by the end of the night, Allen was allegedly so drunk she had to be carried to her car.

Writing on her MySpace blog, she adds, "Last time I wrote (sic) here, I was defending my honour and dignity, explaining my innocence and also outrage at the press for insinuating my behaviour was embarrassing. This time I'm putting my hands up, I got very drunk last night, too drunk. It's not cool getting that drunk, I feel awful ..."

And, although Allen admits she had a good time, Allen also makes sure to warn others about the dangers of drinking: "Kids, drink responsibly or you'll end up looking like this, not pretty!"

Bridget reveals heartache

For Bridget Moynahan, bringing her newborn son home alone last year was "frightening" – and far from a dream – she reveals to Harper's Bazaar.

"I'm not sure anyone – and I could be wrong in this – grows up thinking, 'I want to be a single mom,' " Moynahan, 37, says in the magazine's July issue.

Shortly after the end of her three-year relationship with New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady – who is dating model Gisele Bündchen – Moynahan announced her pregnancy, People.com reports.

"When you're suddenly pregnant and no one is standing by your side, even if you're in your 30s, it's a hard conversation. I'm a traditional girl, and I believe in marriage, and I just always thought that's the way I'd be doing this," she says. "For a moment, it was hard for me to accept that this was the way I was going to have a family."

She gave birth to John – whom she gave her last name – last August. "I walk in and just started sobbing," she says of coming home alone with her son. "All of a sudden, you have this newborn you have no training for. It's frightening."
